

Nomination Checklist

Attention nominators for AAS Prizes! The nomination process has changed. Please read through this checklist to see who is responsible for each part of the nomination.

The tasks of submitting a prize nomination have now been divided between the nominator and the nominee. What follows is a generic nomination checklist showing the responsibilities of each. For self-nominations, of course, the person submitting their nomination must provide all the required information.

The nominator is asked to verify the eligibility of the nominee by reading the prize description and reviewing the recipient list to confirm that the nominee has not already received the prize in question. Where there are date-related eligibility requirements, as for the Cannon Award, the Pierce Prize, and the Warner Prize, the nominator should verify that they will have been met at the time of nomination.

The NOMINATOR will supply the following:

- Nominee's name, institution, and contact e-mail
- Names and contact information for 3 individuals who have agreed to write letters of support
The nominator may act as one of the letter writers, except in the case of a self-nomination.

The NOMINEE will be asked to supply the following:

- Mailing address
- Curriculum vitae (CV)
This document should be no more than 2 pages long (in typical font, single-spaced). It is recommended that only the information relevant to the prize in question be included.
- A bibliography of the candidate's published articles

- Abstracts of three publications illustrative of the candidate's merit

- FOR EARLY CAREER PRIZES ONLY: Year of birth or year of PhD, as required to meet prize criteria
If an extension of the age or year of PhD limit is requested, the nominee will be asked to provide a brief explanation of the family or medical leave that resulted in a career interruption. The nominee should be prepared to provide documentation from their employer if this is requested.
